

CHAPTER 5

Briefing the Case

An appellate brief is a written argument by the appellant or respondent that explains why the superior court acted correctly or incorrectly. Once the record is prepared, it is time to prepare a brief.

There are three briefs: (1) the appellant's opening brief, (2) the respondent's brief and (3) the appellant's reply brief.

- The appellant's opening brief tells the Court of Appeal what judgments or orders the appellant is appealing, why the appellant thinks the superior court acted incorrectly in making those judgments or orders, how the court's actions hurt the appellant, and what the appellant wants the Court of Appeal to do about it if it finds the superior court acted incorrectly.
- The respondent's brief responds to each of the issues raised by the appellant, showing why the appellant's arguments are not correct and expressing support for the trial court's decision.
- The appellant's reply brief addresses the arguments made by the respondent and shows how they do not overcome the arguments made in the appellant's opening brief. No new issues may be raised in the reply brief.

We will discuss each of the briefs separately and then the items needed in all the briefs.

Step 8. Preparing your brief

Appellant's Opening Brief

When is the appellant's opening brief due? The appellant's opening brief is due 30 days after the Court of Appeal notifies the appellant that the clerk's and reporter's transcripts have been filed in the Court of Appeal. If the appellant prepared his or her own transcript and did not request a reporter's transcript, the appellant's opening brief and appendix are due 70 days from the date appellant filed the rule 5.1 election in the superior court. (CRC rule 15(a).) In either case the Court of Appeal sends a notice to appellant that says when the appellant's opening brief is due.

How does the appellant prepare the opening brief? A short example of an appellant's brief can be found on pages 5-11 through 5-17. The appellant uses the facts in the case as determined by the jury or the court at the trial or hearing in superior court. In this example there was no trial, and we have used the “facts” from Goldilocks and the Three Bears as our case. There are only one or two items in our statement of authority and only one issue. Hopefully this example from a familiar story will be helpful as you prepare your tables of contents and authorities and set out the facts and issues of your case. You may find it useful to follow along in the sample brief as you read about the various parts of a brief in the sections that follow.

The appellant’s opening brief includes a table of contents, table of authorities, a statement of the case, a statement of appealability, a statement of facts, a statement of issues, and a conclusion.

The brief starts with a cover sheet, which is merely a photocopy of the cover on white paper. This is followed by the table of contents, which lists the sections of the brief by page number. Then there is a table of authorities, which lists the cases (in alphabetical order), the statutes and other authorities used in the brief, and the number of the page on which each can be found in the brief. These items cannot be completed until the brief is completed, for only then will the page numbers be known.

The next item is a statement of the case. This tells the Court of Appeal the procedural history of the case. It should tell the story of the motions, hearings, and orders that are relevant to the issues of the case, including the date on which the complaint was filed and the date on which the Notice of Appeal was filed. (See “Statement of the Case” on page 5-14.) The appellant must show where this information can be found in the record by referencing the page number(s) of the clerk’s or reporter’s transcript that has this information. The reference is set out in parentheses as CT (clerk’s transcript) or RT (reporter’s transcript). For example: “The complaint in this case was filed on December 25, 2000. (CT 1).” The “(CT 1)” tells the court it can find the first page of the complaint (which will have the file stamp with the date the complaint was filed on it) on page 1 of the clerk’s transcript.¹

Next comes the statement of appealability, where the appellant tells the court why this case is now appealable. This may already be clear to the appellant, but for the person reading the brief for the first time, the statement sets the stage. The case may be appealable because there is a judgment or order of dismissal (after demurrer or other motion) and the case is finished, or there may be an order (usually one after the judgment, or after a hearing in a family law or probate case) or there may be a nonfinal judgment. If you are appealing an order or a nonfinal ruling, you need to explain why it is appealable. (CRC rule 14(a); Code of Civil Procedure, section 904.1.) Generally, an appellant states the statute that gives him or her the right to appeal the case. (See “Statement of Appealability” on page 5-14.)

Then the appellant should set out the facts of his or her case. Before starting on the facts, the appellant should read through the entire record (the reporter’s transcript, clerk’s transcript or appendix, and exhibits, if any). The appellant may use only the information in the transcripts to prepare the statement of facts, because they are the only items the court and/or jury could use to determine the case in the superior court. Remember, the Court of Appeal is not a fact-finding court—fact-finding is what the superior court does. As noted earlier, the Court of Appeal does not change the facts that were found by the superior court judge or the jury. If the record includes conflicting facts (for example, one witness said the light was green, and the other said it was red,) the Court of Appeal presumes the superior court or the jury’s findings on the facts are correct. The Court of Appeal does not change the judge’s or jury’s decision about whom to believe if the witnesses disagreed about what happened. So the appellant should state the facts in the way that supports the judgment or order. The appellant should tell his or her story but should base it only on those things told to the judge or jury, and in a way that fits in with the judgment. (See “Statement of Facts” on page 5-14.) For every statement of fact the appellant makes, there should be a citation showing where that information can be found in the record (the reporter’s transcript, clerk’s transcript or appendix, or exhibits); for every statement of law, there should be a citation to a case, statute, rule, or legal treatise that sets out that proposition. Citations follow the statement and are put in parentheses. (See page 5-23.)

Special considerations for demurrer and summary judgment. Demurrers and summary judgments are two types of cases that may be dismissed before they get to trial (are brought before the judge or jury). The facts in these cases are treated a little differently.

Demurrer. If a plaintiff files a case and the facts in the complaint do not state a cause of action (that is, they give no legal basis for the defendant to be held responsible), the defendant may bring a demurrer asking that the case be dismissed. If a cause of action has been stated, the court overrules the demurrer and the case continues on. If no cause of action has been stated but the court believes there may be more facts that will enable the plaintiff to state a cause of action, the court sustains the demurrer “with leave to amend,” in which case the plaintiff can restate his or her case. If the court believes there is no cause of action, the court sustains the demurrer without leave to amend, and the case is dismissed. This ruling is an order but, by statute, may be appealed. (Code of Civil Procedure, section 581d.) The order must say the case is dismissed. On appeal, the Court of Appeal looks only at the complaint and assumes all of the factual allegations are true in order to rule on whether the complaint states a cause of action.

Summary judgment. In a summary judgment, one party may contend there are no facts that need to be decided, or the parties may agree on what the facts are. Since the superior court is a fact-finding court and there are no facts to be found, the Court of Appeal can determine how the law applies to the facts as stated, and rule in favor of the plaintiff or defendant. Either side (and sometimes both sides) may bring a motion for summary judgment. Unless the parties agree that there are no factual issues—that is, there is no dispute about any of the facts in the case—the court must first make a point of determining that there are none. The court looks to see if there are no differences in the reports of the facts and thus no facts that need to be determined. For example, if all the evidence shows that the light was green, the court does not need to determine whether the light was red or green.

If that is not the case, and there are facts that need to be decided, the summary judgment motion is denied and the matter continues on to trial, at which time the judge or jury decides the facts. If there are no factual issues, the court may grant summary judgment for one party or the other. This ruling is an order. A party seeking to appeal the ruling must first get a judgment based on that ruling. In looking at the facts on appeal, the question is whether there is a dispute as to the facts. If there is a factual dispute, summary judgment should not have been granted and the case should go back to the trial court for a determination of the facts.

Having already written down the facts, write down each of the errors you believe the superior court made. These are the issues that need to be discussed in light of the facts and the laws. The appellant has the burden of showing that there was an error so serious that the court's decision must be reversed. In figuring out the issues, think about what happened at the trial or hearing where the alleged errors were made. Did these errors involve findings of fact, discretionary rulings by the judge, or questions of law? Do you think these rulings were really wrong? What did these rulings do to the outcome of your case?

You may need to read some legal materials on the subject. If so, go to a public law library. (See pages 5-21 and 5-22 for information on library locations and hours.) Look at books that are written about the area of law that your case involves. For example, if your case involves a possible breach of contract for work that was not done or work that was not done properly look in the area of contract law. Ask the librarian to suggest readings about contracts and breaches of contract. In books written about the law ("secondary sources"), you will find mention of cases previously decided in the area of contracts. You may want to read those cases. They may tell you which laws apply to your case. Based on this information and the facts of the case, the appellant should make a list of the issues he or she wants to raise—the issues the appellant thinks hurt his or her case in superior court the most or the ones that would help his or her case the most now.

After making a list of the issues, the appellant then needs to determine what standard of review the court will apply to each issue.

What is the standard of review? When the Court of Appeal reviews an issue, it needs some kind of rules or guidelines to determine whether the superior court made an error in its decision. Different kinds of rulings require different kinds of review guidelines. These guidelines are called standards of review. When the appellant argues that the superior court erred in its ruling, the Court of Appeal looks first at what the standard of review is for that particular issue. The three most common standards of review are (1) abuse of discretion, (2) substantial evidence, and (3) de novo review.

When is the “abuse of discretion” standard used? If the superior court’s decision is one that involved the exercise of its discretion, the “abuse of discretion” standard is used. Any decision for which the judge exercises his or her discretion, such as admissibility of evidence or issuance of restraining orders, comes under this standard. Abuse of discretion occurs when the superior court judge makes a ruling that is arbitrary or absurd—which does not happen very often.

When do you use the “substantial evidence” standard? If the decision being reviewed concerns a ruling in superior court by the judge or the jury having to do with the evidence—most often dealing with a factual determination—the “substantial evidence” standard is used. The Court of Appeal reviews the record to make sure there is substantial evidence to support the factual finding the court or jury made. In doing so, the court focuses on the quality, not the quantity, of the evidence. If there is a conflict in the evidence, the Court of Appeal uses the evidence that supports the ruling made in the superior court. Since the judge or jury at the trial saw the witnesses and heard what the witnesses said, they were in a better position to decide what actually happened and who is telling the truth.

What is the de novo standard? De novo is a Latin phrase meaning “from the beginning.” In de novo review, the Court of Appeal looks at the issue as if the superior court had never ruled on it. This type of review is generally limited to issues involving questions of law. If the issues involve questions of law—for example, the interpretation of a contract or a statute—the Court of Appeal does not assume the superior court’s ruling is correct but looks at the issue “from the beginning,” exercising its independent judgment.

Once you determine which standard of review applies to the issue, you must point out why you think the court made the wrong decision and why you are entitled to reversal under that standard of review. Explain why this incorrect decision harmed your case so much that the error should cause the superior court’s order or judgment to be reversed. Include the names of any books as well as cases and statutes, along with the titles of the books in which you found them, that support your position. For more information on legal citations, see page 5-23.

Think of the discussion as a book in which each issue is a separate chapter. Set off each issue with a heading similar to a chapter title, and subheadings if needed, describing the arguments that will follow. (CRC rule 14(a). (See “Argument” on pages 5-15 and 5-16.)

After the appellant has discussed each issue, he or she should briefly restate in a conclusion his or her position and what he or she wants the court to do. (See “Conclusion” on pages 5-16 and 5-17.)

Respondent’s Brief

When is the respondent’s brief due? The respondent’s brief is due 30 days after the appellant’s opening brief is filed. (CRC rule 15(a).) There is no five-day extension if the appellant’s opening brief was filed by mail. (Code of Civil Procedure, section 1013(a).)

How do you prepare the respondent’s brief? If you are the respondent, you will need to address the facts and legal issues raised in the appellant’s opening brief. First of all, make sure (1) there is a final judgment, if the appeal is from a judgment, or (2) the order is appealable, if the appeal is from an order and (3) the Notice of Appeal was filed on time, or “timely filed.”

Does there need to be a facts section? The facts are already set out in the appellant’s opening brief. However, remember the decision is in the respondent’s favor and the facts must be set out to support the winning side of the case. Make sure the facts, as stated by the appellant, are accurate and any conflicts in the facts have been resolved to support the decision. You may end up with a shorter version of the facts. If you totally agree with the way the appellant has set out the facts, you can ask to adopt those facts as yours. As with the appellant’s opening brief, you need to make a reference to the record for every fact and for every legal statement, and provide headings and subheadings for each point. (CRC rule 14(a).)

What about the issues the appellant has raised? The respondent has the burden of responding to the issues raised by the appellant and showing that the ruling of the trial court was correct. If it was not correct you, as respondent, must show that the mistake the court made was so small that there was no prejudice. You should not rely on the legal references made by the appellant in his or her opening brief. You may need to do some reading on the subject. Go to the county public law library (see pages 5-21 and 5-22) and research the case law and statutes that relate to the issues on appeal. Reread the court’s statement of decision, if there is one, or the orders and judgment set out in the minutes of the court. Be sure to respond to each and every issue raised in appellant’s opening brief. Deal with each issue separately, with headings and subheadings that match the ones used by the appellant. Check the record and make sure that an objection or motion was made to challenge the ruling in the trial court at the time the ruling was made. If no objection or motion was made, the error may have been waived, or given up. Tell the court in your brief if you believe there was a waiver. If the Court of Appeal believes the appellant has waived the issue, it may decide to not even consider the issue the appellant has raised.

There may be additional issues—for example, concerning the statute of limitations or other defenses—that may result in a decision in your favor. You should discuss these issues in your respondent’s brief even though the appellant did not bring them up.

Appellant’s Reply Brief

When is the appellant’s reply brief due? The reply brief is due 20 days after the respondent’s brief is filed. (CRC rule 15(a).) There is no five-day extension if respondent’s brief was served by mail. (Code of Civil Procedure, section 1013(a).)

Why an appellant’s reply brief? Why no response to the reply? Because the appellant has the burden of showing the Court of Appeal that the trial court erred, the appellant is given the opportunity to respond to the respondent’s brief. The appellant’s reply brief is optional. No new issues may be raised in the reply, since the respondent would have no opportunity to rebut them. The appellant should: show how the respondent has not countered the appellant’s claims stated in the opening brief; address the cases and the arguments raised in the respondent’s brief; and respond to new issues raised by the respondent in its brief. There is no response to the reply brief. Briefing has to stop somewhere, and this is where it stops!

Considerations that Apply to All Briefs

Table of contents and table of authority. When you have finished your brief, copy each heading and subheading into a table of contents (which will be page i of your brief). The person reading your brief should be able to get a good overview of the case by skimming the table of contents. Then go through the brief and write down all of the cases you used, then all the statutes, then all the rules of court, then all the other books and articles. List the cases alphabetically, the statutes alphabetically by code and numerically by section number within each code, and the books and articles alphabetically by author. Type these lists—cases, statutes, and “other authorities”—and note on which page each item is found. This is the table of authorities which will be page ii of the brief. (CRC 14(a).) Page 1 will be the first page of the text of your brief.

What about format? Briefs should be:

- Typed;
- On 8-1/2-by-11 inch recycled paper;
- One-and-a-half or double spaced, with single-spaced headings and footnotes; both sides of paper may be used unless prepared with a typewriter;

- Bound on the left side, with staples (if used) covered by tape (most briefs, however, are Velobound);
- Printed with a type size of at least 13 points; and
- Given side margins of 1-1/2 inches, and upper and lower margins of 1 inch.

The cover colors are standardized as follows:

Appellant's opening brief—green
 Respondent's brief—yellow
 Appellant's reply brief—tan
 Appendix—cream
 Petition for rehearing—orange
 Petition for review—white

The pages should be bound in pamphlet or book style. On the cover should be the title of the case, the superior court and Court of Appeal case numbers, the names of the superior court judge and county, the type of brief (for example, "Appellant's Opening Brief," "Respondent's Brief," or "Appellant's Reply Brief" (see "Cover" on page 5-11)), and your name, address, and daytime telephone number. (CRC rule 14 (b).) The court heading should be centered at the top of the brief cover.

What about service? All civil briefs should be served on all the parties, the clerk of the superior court (for delivery to the judge in the case), and the California Supreme Court (five copies) and filed in the Court of Appeal (the original and four copies). (CRC rule 15(a), (c), (d), (e).) For Proof of Service (see pages 5-18 through 5-20; for court addresses, see page 5-21.

What if I need more time to file my brief? If you need more time to file the appellant's opening brief, the respondent's brief and/or the appellant's reply brief, you and opposing counsel can stipulate (agree, see Chapter 3, footnote 1) to up to a maximum of 60 days in extensions for each brief. Stipulations (see Chapter 6, pages 6-25 through 6-27) must be filed in the Court of Appeal before the date the brief is due. If you need more time and have already stipulated to 60 days or if you are unable to get opposing counsel to agree to a stipulated extension, you must file a motion or application for extension of time with the Court of Appeal. (CRC, rule 15(b).) (See "Request for Extension of Time" in Chapter 6.)

What if the brief is late? If the appellant's opening brief or a respondent's brief is late, a notice (under CRC rule 17) will be sent that gives the party 15 more days to file the brief. If the appellant's opening brief is not filed within the 15-day grace period allowed under the rule, the appeal will be dismissed. If the respondent's brief is not filed within the 15-day rule 17 grace period, the court will decide the case on the appellant's opening brief, the record, and any oral argument by the appellant. (CRC rule 17.) Within the rule 17 period, a party may apply for an extension of that time for good cause. If a brief is not filed during the extension, the court may dismiss the appeal. (CRC rule 17(d).)

How are exhibits sent to the Court of Appeal? In some superior courts, exhibits are lodged with the court. Since they were lodged, the superior court returns the exhibits to the parties at the end of the case.

This is the way exhibits are handled in San Diego and Imperial Counties. A party wishing to have the Court of Appeal consider an original exhibit must file a notice (which designates the exhibits to be sent) in superior court within 10 days after the respondent's brief is filed. A copy of the notice must be sent to the Court of Appeal. Ten days after the notice is filed in superior court, any other party wishing to have the Court of Appeal consider additional exhibits may also file a notice in the Superior court. Under CRC, rule 18(b), the Superior court and the party requesting that exhibits be lodged with the Court of Appeal must each put the designated exhibits in their possession into numerical or alphabetical order. The exhibits are sent to the Court of Appeal along with two copies of the list of exhibits being sent. Since exhibits are lodged with the Court of Appeal, they will be returned at the end of the case.

What if the briefs are not prepared properly or not filed at all? If the brief is not done properly—for example has no table of authorities or no citations to the record—the court may, at the request of the opposing party or on its own motion, strike the brief and return it to the party for corrections and changes. In making these corrections, generally it is necessary to prepare a new document, which must be served on all the parties and filed with the court. If the incorrect or omitted items have been redone properly, the court files the corrected document. If the items have not been redone properly, the court may dismiss the case if it is an appellant's opening brief, or let the appeal proceed on the record and the appellant's opening brief if it is the respondent's brief.

BRIEF - INSTRUCTIONS

Appellant's Opening Brief is due 30 days from the date the record on appeal is filed in the Court of Appeal or 70 days from the date you elected to proceed by way of rule 5.1 with no reporter's transcript. The cover of Appellant's Opening Brief is green. If you are an appellant and you do not file an Appellant's Opening Brief, your appeal will be dismissed.

Respondent's Brief is due 30 days from the date the Appellant's Opening Brief is filed. The cover of Respondent's Brief is yellow. If you are a respondent and you do not file a Respondent's Brief, the court will decide the appeal on the record, the opening brief and any oral argument by the appellant. You will not be able to orally argue your case if you are a respondent and don't file a Respondent's Brief.

Appellant's Reply Brief is optional but if you want to file one it is due 20 days from the date the Respondent's Brief is filed. The cover of Appellant's Reply Brief is tan. There is no penalty for not filing an Appellant's Reply Brief.

Each brief must contain a Table of Contents and a Table of Authorities. A brief must not be longer than 14,000 words, or approximately 50 pages. An original plus four copies of the brief must be filed in the Court of Appeal. A proof of service must accompany the brief showing service on the Supreme Court (5 copies), the Superior Court (1 copy), all counsel and self-represented parties.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Three Bears filed a complaint in August 2001 alleging Goldilocks had trespassed on their property by entering their home when they were not at home, consuming a meal and falling asleep in a bed. Frightened at discovering Goldilocks, Baby Bear has suffered resulting physical and mental damages in the amount of $50,000 as testified to by an expert bear/child psychologist. After a civil trial on the matter over a period of two days, the court found Goldilocks had committed trespass and awarded Bears $50,000.

STATEMENT OF APPEALABILITY

This appeal is from the judgment of the San Diego County Superior Court and is authorized by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 904.1, subsection (a)(1).

STATEMENT OF FACTS [NOTE: Your statement of facts must have references to where in the record the facts can be found.]

Papa Bear lives in San Diego, California with his wife, Mama Bear and son, Baby Bear. Appellant Goldilocks lives a few miles away on the other side of the forest. The Bears' neighbor, Gloria Gardner, watched what happened from her garden next door.

Gardner testified she saw the Bear family leave their house without shutting the front door about 8:00 a.m. and saw Goldilocks enter the house at about 8:30. At about 9:30 a.m. she heard screams and saw Goldilocks run from the Bears' house.

The Bears testified that when they returned from the walk, they saw they had left the front door open. Food was missing from the dining room table. Baby Bear found Goldilocks asleep in his bed. Terrified, Baby Bear screamed and woke up Goldilocks. Startled and confused, Goldilocks ran from the Bears' house.

An expert bear cub psychologist, Dr. Dramatic, who has done extensive research in the phobias of young bears, testified to the traumatic effects when a bear cub comes in contact with a human child. Baby Bear had physical symptoms of blackouts stemming from his encounter with Goldilocks as well as mental anguish requiring therapy.

Goldilocks testified she was looking for a boarding facility to take a rest, the Bears' house was very large, there was no fence to indicate this was private property, the door of the house was left open and there was a mat at the front door that said "WELCOME". She thought this was a commercial boarding establishment, as large amounts of food were set out as if for guests; she looked for someone to ask about spending the night and saw several sets of chairs and beds all in different sizes. She sat down on a bed and fell asleep.

ARGUMENT

Issue 1

GOLDILOCKS WAS GIVEN IMPLIED CONSENT TO ENTER THE HOUSE AND THUS HER ENTRY WAS NOT "WRONGFUL"

A. The Standard of Review. The trial court erred in finding that Goldilocks trespassed on the Bears' property as there is no substantial evidence to support that finding. On review, the appellate court looks to the record to see if there are facts to support the trial court or jury's findings. If there is any substantial evidence to support the verdict, the court will affirm. If there are conflicts in the facts, the court will resolve the conflict in favor of the party who won in the trial court. (Williams v. Wraxall (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 120, 132.)

B. The Elements of the Action. A trespass occurs when a person intentionally, recklessly or negligently enters land in the possession of another. (Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal.App.2d 638, 645.) The intent to enter is the only intent needed. (Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1480.) However, consent or permission to enter upon the property is a defense. (Williams v. General Elec. Credit Corp. (1946) 159 Cal.App.2d 527, 532; Rest.2d Torts, section 167.)

C. No Evidence of Wrongful Entry. Here, Goldilocks did not intend to enter on private property. She thought the Bears' house was a public, commercial boarding house. Although her actual intent is not a legal defense, her actual intent reinforces her argument that she had consent to enter the building. The door was open, the WELCOME mat was out, the food was on the table, and there were many beds and chairs about. All of this points to the conclusion the Bears were prepared for and awaiting the arrival of numerous persons and supports Goldilocks' belief this was a boarding house and there was no reason for her not to enter. At a minimum the house was prepared and open for an "open house". No evidence points to any indication the house was closed, off-limits to outsiders, or limited in the types of persons who would be admitted. There is no evidence to support a finding Goldilocks' entry was wrongful. The judgment must be reversed.

CONCLUSION

Goldilocks submits the Three Bears have failed to meet their burden of proving that her entry into their house was wrongful and, thus, a trespass. All of the evidence supports a finding that the Bears by their conduct consented to Goldilocks' entry into the house. Goldilocks respectfully asks that this Court reverse the decision of the trial court and vacate the award of damages.

Respectfully submitted,

CITING YOUR SOURCES OF INFORMATION

Arguments over citation abound. Don't fret. We are mainly interested in finding where you got the information you have included in the brief. As noted in the text, you can take a very bare bones approach and put the name of the book that is on the spine and the page number (for example "Official California Appellate Reports, 4th series #43, 1996, p. 303 for a case or for a secondary source). A secondary source is a book that is written about the laws and the cases such as Witkin, Continuing Education books, and law reviews. Most of the titles in the Bibliography (page 5-24) are secondary sources. Primary sources include, for example, cases, codes, constitutions, and administrative regulations. For a statute give the name of the code (for example, Code of Civil Procedure) and the section number (for example, section 1013). The total citation would look like this: Code of Civil Procedure, section 1013.

If you want to be more proper about the form of your citation, look in some of the books in the bibliography (page 5-24) or look at a copy of the California Style Manual (4th ed.). As you will see, a full, proper citation, rather than a "bare bones" one, includes the name of the case. For example, the bare bones citation in the first paragraph in proper form would be: Marsh v. Mountain Zephyr, Inc. (1996) 43 Cal.App.4th 289, 303. The information is the name of the case; the year it was filed; the volume of the set (43), name (Cal.App. which stands for California Appellate Court opinion); set (4th); number of page in the volume with the first page of the opinion (289); and page where the information that you have used is found (303). If the name of the set is "California Appellate Reports" the cases were written by the Court of Appeal; if the name is "California Reports", the cases were written by the California Supreme Court.

The citation to secondary sources varies with the source. Basically one uses the title of the book, the edition, the year it was published and the page on which the information you used can be found. If the book has a single author, put the last name of the author before the title.

For Code Sections you need only cite the name of the code and the number of the section as shown in paragraph 1.
